

ABSTRACT

RESEARCH PAPER: Parental Perceptions of Their Sport Involvement with Late Adolescent Student Athletes

STUDENT: Megan Ridley

DEGREE: Master of Arts

COLLEGE: Applied Sciences and Technology

DATE: July 2013

PAGES: 48

This study has presented empirical evidence regarding the perceived sport involvement of parents for their high school children. To date, no research has specifically investigated parental involvement in sport using the PAR Theory, thus ensuring the significance of the study. Results will add to the literature on scholastic parental involvement while providing empirical data on the applicability of the PAR Theory to scholastic sport. Ultimately, this research could aid in educational efforts for parents which could eventually serve to improve the overall high school athletic experience for parents and their children.